CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776. Declaration of the thirteen united States of America.

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its basis on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all reference to the present and the future, shall be to the safety and the happiness of the People.

But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them to absolute Tyranny, it is their duty to throw off such Government, and to institute new Government, laying its basis on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all reference to the present and the future, shall be to the safety and the happiness of the People.

And the history of the United States is a history of the struggle for Liberty. The first step was the Declaration of Independence, which was adopted on July 4, 1776. This was followed by the Constitution, which was adopted on September 17, 1787. The Constitution established a new form of government, one of the most perfect ever known to mankind. It provided for a separation of powers into three branches: the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. It also provided for a system of checks and balances, which has been the key to the success of our government.

The Declaration of Independence was a landmark document in the history of the United States. It declared that the thirteen colonies were no longer part of Great Britain, and that they were now free and independent states. This was a bold statement, and it was met with great opposition from the British. However, the Declaration was a necessary step in the process of creating a new nation.

The Declaration of Independence was signed by the delegates to the Continental Congress, who were representing the thirteen colonies. The signing took place on September 17, 1776, in the Independence Hall in Philadelphia. The Declaration was then sent to the states for their approval. It was approved by the states on September 26, 1776.

From every side, from towns statewide
 With vessels all too small,
 Across such land with rivers grand,
 We came to fill them all:
 O this good store of Wisdom's lore
 At M.S.D.'s dear fount;
 I've followed tracks and faced setbacks,
 Too numerous to count.
 But that is past and now, at last,
 With vessels set and full,
 And from this spring, though memories cling,
 Our anchors we shall pull.

We linger yet to sense our debt
 Ere each one seeks his way;
 And with our light the Future's bright
 To carry where we stray.
 Our friendships true of proven hue
 That now we vow to keep,
 Unless held bright by memories' light,
 Will lose themselves in sleep:
 But we proclaim to keep the flame
 Of memories true and free:
 These happy days and worthy ways
 With friends at M.S.D.
